Flying Clubs

Garry Ackerman

Thursday, June 12, 2008 - Flying Clubs

What is the most economical way to learn to fly? How can you have access to several airplanes without the costs and headaches of ownership? How do you find and associate with other pilots who share your love of aviation? The answer is: Join a Flying Club. Even pilots who already have their own airplane may find advantages in belonging to a flying club.

If you own a fast, expensive airplane that is great for cross-country trips, you may prefer to fly the inexpensive club airplane for local sightseeing, pattern work, or that weekly trip to a nearby airport for lunch. If your plane is down for maintenance, you might like to have a backup in the club planes, so that you can still take that planned, family trip. As a flying club member, you can gain proficiency and get time in several different airplanes, so that you are a more versatile pilot. If you are interested in getting an instrument rating and your own plane is not fully equipped, you can use the club planes and instructors for your training.

Garry Ackerman is a founding member of the North Texas Flying Club of McKinney. He will tell us about the North Texas Flying Club and provide insight on how belonging to it may benefit you. You will learn more about how membership in a flying club is one of the best ways to increase your pilot skills and lower the cost of flying. Remember that our next meeting is upstairs in Room A217, rather than the usual Pike Hall.
